Thorough Search Fails To Uncover More Bodies Near Graves of Widow and Three Children.

VICTIM'S FIRST MATE OBTAINED BY MAIL

BOSTON, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Mrs. Eva Nelson, a sister of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, who was murdered by Harry F. Powers, is said to have confessed at Clarksburg, W. Va., said tonight. Mrs. Lemke "never would listen to our advice against matrimonial agencies."

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 30.

(AP)—Harry F. Powers, 45, suave West Virginian who confessed turning to mass murder as a means of livelihood, added another chapter late today to the story of his career as a modern-day Bluebeard.

After an hour of questioning, the accused confessed freely to the killing of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, 30, of Northboro, Mass., whose body was the fifth to be uncovered in the slime of a sewer trench on Powers' "murder farm" in the hills near this city.

At the same time, police announced, Powers described for the first time the means he employed in killing his other four victims—Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher, widow of Park Ridge, Ill., and her three children.

Four of the persons, he revealed, were strangled and then beaten. One died solely from beating with a hammer.

Powers—or Cornelius Pierson, as he often styled himself—told at length of how he lured his women victims to his city through extravagantly worded advertisements in matrimonial agency periodicals, with a view to obtaining their property and bank accounts, and how he slew the five persons, all of them on the same evening.

The two women came to Clarksburg at almost the same time, "about August 1, Powers was quoted as relating.

Early in the day he took the Illinois widow and her three children to the oddly-constructed gallows he had built on the outskirts of Clarksburg, and made them prisoners in individual soundproof tile chambers, specially fashioned in the basement of the small, frame building.

Mrs. Lemke arrived from New England later in the day and she, in turn, was taken to the garage and imprisoned.

Then, police said, Powers related how one by one he removed his five victims to the upper floor of the garage, where a rope was suspended from a rafter.

Each of the persons, excepting Mrs. Eicher's son, Harry, 12, was hanged. Fearing that strangulation might not be complete, the slayer then mashed in their heads with a hammer, he was quoted as saying. The Eicher boy, Powers said, was felled with a hammer blow. The five bodies then were buried in the sewer trench beneath the gallows.

COLONEL T. LARRY GANTT

COL. LARRY GANTT PASSES AT ATHENS

Pioneer Georgia Newspaperman and Political Leader Dies in 85th Year

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 30.—Colonel T. Larry Gantt, once a potent political and journalistic factor in Georgia and South Carolina, died at his home here this morning at 5 o'clock. He was 84 years of age.

Colonel Gantt was invalided several years ago when he was knocked down by an automobile on a downtown street. His hip was fractured and since that time he has been confined to his bed, although carrying on his personal column in the Athens Banner-Herald until about a month ago.

"Larry" Gantt, as he was known throughout Georgia and South Carolina, was prominent throughout both states for his political activity and for his interest in farms and plantations, his whole life having been devoted to the interest of the democratic party and to furthering the cause of farmers.

Born in Lowndesville, S. C., the youngest of four children of Thomas W. Gantt and Emma Frances Groves, Mr. Gantt was on his father's side, a great-grandson of Sir John Roll of the British navy. Mr. Gantt attended school in Lowndesville and later at Charleston, until his twelfth year when the War Between the States began.

While his fathers and brothers were in the service, young Larry Gantt became a mail boy, taking up farming with his father when the latter returned from the war.

Farming as such did not appeal to the embryo newspaperman and he walked to Elberton, Ga., from his home in Elbert county and there obtained a position setting type. From his apprenticeship on the Elberton paper, he went to the Augusta Chronicle, where he continued his newspaper work.

From Augusta he moved to Savannah, where he served for a time on the Morning News, where he became associated with Joel Chandler Harris. Chicago next saw young Gantt in the composing room where he achieved renown as the fastest typesetter in the city.

Afghan 'Quakes Take Heavy Toll of Life

KARACHI, India, Aug. 30.—(UP)—Severe earthquakes took a large toll of lives and did wide damage along the Afghan frontier, were reported today in belated advices from Baluchistan.

At least 30 persons were killed and hundreds were injured in the towns of Moch, Abigum and Panjur, which were destroyed, the messages said.

About 200 shocks were felt in three days. At least 65 of the shocks occurred between 10 p. m. Thursday and 6 a. m. Friday. Entire hills disappeared in some districts and whole towns collapsed in ruins, the messages reported. Most of the population escaped into the fields after the first shock, but authorities feared that later shocks would show the extent of the disaster to be greatly increased. Only a small area in the vicinity of railroad telegraph lines has yet been reported.

LEAGUE CHARGES TARIFF IS CAUSE OF TRADE SWAMP

European Nations Meet at Geneva To Discuss Ways of Preventing Higher Barriers.

BY P. I. LIPSEY JR.
GENEVA, Aug. 30.—(AP)—A vigorous attack upon protective tariff systems will be renewed under League of Nations auspices tomorrow when political chiefs and economic experts of 26 nations gather here on an economic coordinating committee of the commission for European unity.

A direct indictment of tariff walls as one of the fundamental causes of the prevailing world depression will be placed before the Europeans in the report of economic experts who have been studying Europe's need since the last session of the commission in May.

As long as the free movement of goods is obstructed by high customs duties, the report will declare, there is no chance for an improvement in Europe and the world's grave economic situation.

Restrictions on the international movement of capital and labor also are attacked along with tariffs as contributing to the world's ills.

The general assault upon tariffs is stimulated by a fear felt on the continent that the British government may enact protective legislation for its industries.

Under the impulse of this fear, leaders of a number of continental countries are anxious to obtain some agreement for stabilizing the existing tariffs and preparing a way for lowering them.

Such action, it is felt, would strengthen the beleaguered free trade movement in England. Continental economists have asserted that creation of protective tariff walls by Great Britain would set loose unrestricted economic warfare throughout the world. Some political observers expressed the belief that a British protective system would be a world catastrophe.

Another influence for general tariff reduction which is almost certain to make itself felt on the coordinating committee's work is the part of the "bankers' committee" report. The bankers denounced artificial obstacles to commerce as an essential factor in the European and world economic dislocation.

Julius Curtius, German foreign minister, arrived today with the German delegation which will participate in the committee work. The League of Nations council session begins Tuesday and the League's assembly on the following Monday.

Maxim Litvinoff, Russian commissar for foreign affairs, was expected to arrive tonight or tomorrow, as was Andrei Franco-Poncet, French undersecretary for national economy, who will represent France on the coordinating committee. Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, of Italy, will arrive tomorrow.

Sir Sidney Chapman will speak for Great Britain in the economic coordination deliberations, while Viscount Cecil will be the British representative at subsequent meetings of the League.

ZEPPELIN SPEEDS TOWARD BRAZIL

Graf Swings Down African Coast on Non-Stop Ocean Crossing.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Aug. 30.—(UP)—The rigid Graf Zeppelin, making another flight across the south Atlantic ocean to Brazil, took the western coast of Africa tonight after a smooth journey from Friedrichshafen.

The dirigible, commanded by Dr. Hugo Eckener, was attempting a non-stop flight to Natal, on the northeast corner of the South American continent, rather than making short stops along the route as on its last journey across the Atlantic.

At 5 p. m. G. M. T. (noon E. S. T.) Dr. Eckener radioed the home base here that he was at 35.42 north, a few miles off the Spanish Moroccan coast.

Previously the ship had reported a quiet flight to the Mediterranean, which it reached at 4:30 a. m. after a trip down the Rhine valley. It continued over the Mediterranean to the island of Minorca, in the Balearic Isles, at 9 a. m. and thence to Cape Palos before turning out over the Atlantic.

Dr. Eckener planned to follow the previous route to the Canary Islands and the Cape Verde Islands, striking an almost straight course southward toward Natal.

Move To Oust Beavers And Install "Outsider" Denied by Board Head

Alderman Alvin Richards, Chairman of Police Committee, Asserts That Published Statements Quoting Him on Shake-Up Were Grossly Incorrect—Says Macon Chief Not 'Approached' by Members.

Flat denial that any concerted move is under way to force the retirement of Chief of Police James L. Beavers or to install an "outsider" as head of Atlanta's police department, was made Sunday by Alderman Alvin Richards, chairman of the police committee of council.

Commenting on newspaper reports published Sunday to the effect that he had revealed the groundwork for a drastic shake-up in the local law enforcement force, Alderman Richards categorically denied he had authorized such statements, and asserted that they were grossly incorrect.

"As long as I read a Sunday paper, I have no basis for this 'outsider' rumor. I have not discussed this matter attributed to me with any of my colleagues on the police committee, and naturally I would not make such statements without first consulting other members of the committee. The whole thing is unauthorized."

Chief Watkins said in Macon Sunday night that he had not been "approached" by the Atlanta police committee, and that he knew nothing of any reported movement to replace Chief Beavers.

The story to which the police committee chairman took exception stated that the committee members were looking for "suitable successors" to Chief Beavers; that Mayor James L. Key was represented by Mr. Richards as favoring the change when a successor "acceptable to the mayor" was found; and quoted Mr. Richards as admitting that the committee "now is seeking such a man," adding, "frankly, I do not know where we will find him."

But that there had been more than a cursory discussion among members of the committee of the question of reorganizing the police department, Alderman Richards stoutly denied. He insisted that nothing definite had been planned, and asserted that he does not at this time know of anything in definite prospect.

TREASURY TO SELL BILLION IN BONDS

Will Use Funds To Overcome Mounting Deficit; Income Drops.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Already $387,000,000 in the hole, although the present fiscal year is but two months old, the treasury tonight announced it would seek to raise more than a billion dollars on long-term bond and certificate issues.

Secretary Mellon said the paper would include $800,000,000 worth of bonds to carry 3 per cent interest and to run for 20 to 24 years, and $300,000,000 in a certificate issue at 1-1/8 per cent.

The bond issue will be the third of the present calendar year, the treasury having issued $600,000,000 of that kind in May and another $800,000,000 in June. The new financing indicated to some that the treasury would follow its policy of increasing the public debt and that it might increase to make up the deficit. The deficit for the last fiscal year was $903,000,000.

It was the new year began receipts have shown a decline of about $11,000,000 over last year, while expenditures were about $38,000,000 more for the same number of days up to August 1.

Income taxes, which dropped $550,000,000 last year, continued their downward swing, and in July and August this year were nearly $10,000,000 less.

It was last year's sharp decline in income receipts that caused Secretary Mellon and Undersecretary Mills to suggest some new basis might be found necessary for the taxation system. Neither, however, has intimated that he would recommend such a revision to congress, and previous statements were interpreted by other treasury workers as indicating that a revision would not be made until legislative session begins in December of 1933.

Some belief persisted that, despite efforts to reduce expenditures, it might be necessary this winter to raise additional revenue.

Both the new bond and certificate issues will be dated September 15. The bonds, which will mature in 1955, will be callable in 1931. The interest on the bonds will be the lowest paid in recent years on that form of securities.

Proceeds of the sale will be used to retire $654,000,000 in certificates which mature September 15. To carry $300,000,000 interest on the public debt, and to provide funds to operate the government until December 15, when $904,000,000 in treasury bonds and certificates will fall due.

NEW YORK GIRL SHOT BY GUNMEN ON BUSY STREET

Hundreds of Children Escape Bullets of Gangsters; Intended Victim Foils Assassination.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Gangster bullets raked a street crowded with children in the Red Hook section of Brooklyn late today, felling an 18-year-old girl. Between 100 and 200 smaller children and the target of the shots escaped injury. The gangsters, who witnesses said fired between six and eight shots in all, fled in four days.

The wounded girl was Jennie Ballantino, who was on her way to a moving picture show with several other girls. She was struck in the right wrist by a stray bullet. At the hospital it was said she was not seriously wounded.

Police said the shots were intended for Joseph Santora, 45, a boss stevedore and longshoreman. Santora reported to police last night that two men were seeking to extort tribute from him and he had refused. They demanded he pay them money if he wanted to continue his trade unmolested, he said.

Santora, who escaped the fusillade of shots by crouching prone on the sidewalk, was questioned and then released. Police said they knew the identity of the two gunmen, who were seen in the direction of a ferry station after the shooting.

The shots, fired from revolvers, came from a parked sedan. The Ballantino girl was half a block away when struck.

Santora, father of 12 children, has no police record.

NEW JERSEY SCOURED FOR SLAYER OF DUFFY

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 30.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Record says Mickey Duffy, South Jersey racketeer king, was killed in Atlantic City yesterday by his own henchmen and that Duffy lieutenants will "get" the killers within four days.

According to the paper, every available gunman was given orders last night by their chiefs to shoot down on sight any of the men suspected of slaying the racketeer king. In every Duffy roadhouse and night club in South Jersey and this part of Pennsylvania, the paper says, an alert was stationed tonight to get vengeance.

The orders to "get the little guy that knocked off Mickey" were issued after a conference of ten Duffy aides in a night club in Pacific and Miami avenues, Atlantic City. The Record says.

State police today arrested Harry J. Green, 32, Duffy's gambling manager, and James "Richie" Mickes (Jimmy) Toland, 42, an ex-pugilist, and held them for questioning.

The men, police said, each had a .38 caliber revolver. They were charged with illegal possession of firearms. Duffy, the Atlantic City corner said, was killed by .38 caliber bullets.

LIEUTENANT SANDERSON

ROOSEVELT PLAN WILL BE PUSHED

Governor's Relief Proposals Get Right of Way in New York Legislature

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 30.—(AP)—Governor Roosevelt's unemployment relief program had the right of way for the second week of the special session of the New York state legislature as the senators and assemblymen returned to Albany tonight.

Senator George R. Keaton, republican majority leader, announced at Syracuse that the state's relief measures would be pushed through as speedily as possible.

"Other issues can wait," he said in discussing the unemployment situation. He pointed out that home relief in 20 cities must be aided by outside help this winter and "the only place they can get it is from the state."

"The governor and legislature are in agreement on that proposition." The administration phase of the relief plan seems to be the only point of difference between Governor Roosevelt and the republican legislative majority. The governor in his message last week proposed that a committee of three, to serve without pay, be appointed to supervise the distribution of the $20,000,000 fund to be raised. The republican leaders have expressed their opinion that it can be handled through the existing state welfare agency and its county and city subdivisions. All seem in accord with the plan to raise the money by a 50 per cent increase in the state income tax.

All interested groups will be given the opportunity to voice their opinions on the relief measures, the leaders of both parties have agreed, before they vote before the senate and assembly for vote.

Following consideration of the unemployment relief measures will probably come the question of the upstate investigation. A legislative inquiry into the administration of republican controlled cities and counties has been demanded by democratic leaders since such an investigation began in New York city. Republican legislators have not expressed any opposition.

CALIFORNIA PLAN DRAWS PRAISE OF FEDERAL GROUP

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—(AP)—An employment stabilization program now in operation in California, a prominent feature of which is work assurance to wage earners, today drew the official endorsement of President Hoover's unemployment relief organization.

Proposals for guaranteeing work to those now employed in order to encourage spending have been advanced from many quarters. The American Federation of Labor has urged adoption of the plan, the United States Chamber of Commerce has been studying it, and President Hoover has indicated his sympathy with it.

Fred C. Croton, assistant director of the president's relief organization, lauded the "soundness and practicality, from the standpoint of business management" of the California plan.

CLEVELAND CROWD SEES PAIR ESCAPE BY SWIFT LEAPING

Nine-Plane Squadron in Midst of Intricate Maneuvers Over Crowded Airport When Two Ships Crash at 1,500 Feet.

WINGS RIPPED OFF AS PILOT WATCHES

Sanderson Jumps When Plane Goes to Pieces, Brice Dazed by Impact But Recovers in Time.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 30.—(AP)—The 1931 national air races opened a new bag of tricks today for a Sunday crowd of more than 30,000 people.

From the opening thrill, when two flying "leathernecks" narrowly cheated death by taking to parachutes, until the foreign stunt pilots cut the air at dusk with unprecedented aerial antics, aviation spread out the cream of its abilities.

Lieutenant S. L. Sanderson, commander, and Lieutenant W. O. Brice, member of fighting squadron No. 9, "balled out" and landed with little damage when their planes collided at 1,500 feet within view of the grandstand crowd. Sanderson, known as "Old Sandy," and a veteran flyer, was bruised slightly on the face in landing, but Brice was unhurt.

Lieutenant Sanderson said he jumped when he saw the wings of his plane rip off immediately after the wings of the other plane touched. He said he "didn't have time to be scared." Lieutenant Brice said he was dazed for a moment when the wings of the two planes touched against the cowlings of his ship and that he "couldn't just see how I managed to get out."

Foreign Flyer Thrills. It was the marine squadron's second accident since leaving its Quantic base, one of the planes having been damaged by a forced landing near Cleveland Friday. It also was the second accident at the race field. On Friday evening Flight Commander R. L. Atcherley, of England, here with the international group of flyers for demonstrations, was injured in landing. He was back at the races today, however.

The close of the transcontinental sweepstakes handicap derby, when Mrs. Phoebe Omie, Memphis, Tenn., led 51 contestants across the finish line, gave officials a task of compiling ratings that was expected to last far into the night.

Major Ernst Udet, headliner of the European band of aerial acrobats, began a series of low altitude flights, with a series of low altitude flights, the like of which veteran flyers said they had never seen before.

Looping, diving, and nearly scraping the ground in a brand of "crazy" flying, he ended the display by cutting out his motor and using his plane as a glider for a series of loops and barrel rolls.

Lieutenant A. J. Williams, former navy flyer, introduced novelty into his flying by taking instructions from the ground by radio.

Lands on One Foot. John Livingston, Aurora (Ill.) pilot, initiated his campaign to repeat a high number of victories in last year's races by taking first place in a dead-stick landing contest.

He landed 1 foot 9 inches from a red flag, a margin of five inches over his nearest competitor, Lloyd Yost, Pinehurst, N. C. Third place was won by Arthur Davis, East Lansing, Mich.

Qualifiers in the one-mile straightaway speed show were in planes of 175 cubic inch displacement were led by S. M. M. Lambert, Niles, Mich., who flew a Heath at an average speed of 124.30 miles an hour.

Second place went to Barton Stevenson, Kansas City, 130.93 miles an hour in a Monocoupe, with Arthur C. Cheater, Joliet, third at 128.43 miles an hour in a Davis.

Three other pilots exceeded 125 miles an hour, well above the 75-mile qualifying mark.

Phony Race Postponed. Officials announced late tonight that the high-speed cross-country race for the Bendix trophy, due to start tomorrow from Los Angeles, had been postponed until Tuesday.

Six of the nation's crack pilots are entered in the contest which may be continued in Page 5, Column 6.

MUSSOLINI'S ROME LARGER THAN CAESAR'S

ROME, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Mussolini's Rome is almost seven times as large as Julius Caesar's and has gained 250,000 in population under the rule of 11 Duce.

First Italian city in rank, Rome had a population of 1,003,881 on May 31, it was announced today. In ancient times, Rome's greatest population was 312,000 in 585 B. C.

Farm Board's Lack of Money Blocks George Cotton Plan

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Although apparently willing to adopt the plan for the relief of the distressed cotton industry put forward by Senator George W. Harrison, a group of his southern colleagues during the past week, the federal farm board will probably be compelled to forego any further extended effort at stabilization because of the tremendous losses it has sustained in its past operations.

This conclusion was supported today by an analysis of the board's finances showing that out of the $500,000,000 fund provided by congress at the time the federal farm marketing act was approved two years ago the board has already expended a total of $365,000,000 in purchases of the two principal agricultural commodities alone—cotton and wheat.

The $365,000,000 investment, which now shows a loss to the government of 64 per cent due to declining prices, does not include the additional millions that have been loaned by the board to the various co-operative associations involving wheat, cotton, dairying, citrus fruits and naval stores.

In short the board's finances are in such shape, it may be said, that it finds itself unable to raise the money necessary for a further major commodity buying operation, such as called for in the George proposal.

Senator George himself, who called a conference of senators from the cotton-growing states last week to canvass the situation with the board, estimated that the board cash requirements for the execution of his plan would be less than $50,000,000, but it is obvious that the board is not in shape to raise this money at the moment.

The situation is complicated by the necessity of the board undertaking the same plan with regard to wheat. Political considerations would make this mandatory, and it would require an additional $50,000,000 to give the George plan application to wheat. The money just isn't available.

This is now taken to explain the attitude of the southern senators and the farm board in refusing to make any definite statement following the extended conference held on the cotton situation Friday. It is understood that individual members of the board, after going over all the essential points of the Georgia senator's plan, expressed confidence in its successful execution, but were held back by the lack of funds now revealed. They have been restrained from making any public statement since then, while seeking to arrange for the funds.

In the light of the foregoing added significance is attached to the conference held with officials of the federal reserve board Saturday by Senator George and Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, one of those participating in the general conferences. It is now believed that the two senators were seeking to have the reserve board aid in raising the necessary funds.

Unless the farm board can raise additional funds from the federal reserve system or through private banking interests through loans on commodities now held it will be necessary for congress to make further appropriations available before the cotton plan can be adopted. Congress next meeting until December, a special session would have to be called by the president, who has indicated opposition to this course. In view of the emergency, both Senator George and Senator W. J. Harris, of Georgia, have strongly urged Mr. Hoover to call an extra session.

Feeling that everything had been done for the moment that is possible, Senator George returned to his home on Sea Island tonight. Before leaving he issued the following statement reviewing the efforts put forth by himself and his colleagues:

"I came to Washington not only for the purpose of discussing the plan for handling the present cotton crop suggested by me to the farm board, the agency of government set up for the purpose of considering any plan which the board might believe feasible and which it is in position to announce immediately and to carry out vigorously. The southern senators have endeavored to impress upon the board the acute emergency now facing the cotton growers of the south and to urge action without delay. We have presented the problem to the president, to members of the federal reserve bank and to the farm board, and the matter is now in the hands of the board.

"I have earnestly urged the board to reach its decision promptly and to adopt any reasonable plan which it is in position to execute, based upon the primary condition that the 1932 cotton acreage be held by at least 50 per cent or more, and that the cotton now on hand and held by the board be carried to some definite date in the future and then offered in approximately monthly installments over a reasonable period of time.

"The senators who came to Washington have done everything possible to induce the board to act in this emergency, and I have impressed upon the board the imperative necessity to reach and announce its decision at once in order that the farmer, his friends and allied interests may know what to expect and how to proceed."

Most of the farm board's losses have resulted from its wheat operations. Altogether it has bought a total of 258,000,000 bushels of wheat at an aggregate price of $217,900,000. Cotton purchases have totaled 1,300,000 bales, exclusive of holdings of the co-operatives which were financed by the board. The board's cotton holdings cost $104,000,000.

Thus the total investment in these two commodities is $321,900,000. But an additional $43,940,000 is to be added as carrying charges, making the total cost more than $365,000,000. Based on current market quotations the board has a loss of $265,365,000 on its cotton and wheat investments. It would be necessary for the board to obtain 18 cents per pound for its cotton, which it paid an average of 16 cents per pound, in order for it to come out even on the project. A similar mark-up in the price of wheat would be necessary to break even there.

SPECIAL SESSION SEEN BY OBSERVERS IN TEXAS

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Belief that a special session of the Texas legislature would be called to consider the cotton marketing crisis was growing in the state capital here today despite the fact that Governor Ross S. Sterling indicated it was too early to comment yet.

The belief was based largely on the overwhelming sentiment of such a call as was being expressed by farmers in telegrams and letters coming into the governor's office. The messages are in reply to Governor Sterling's newspaper questionnaire in which he said he would be guided in calling a special cotton session by the sentiment of the farmers.

Of the hundreds of messages pouring into the office of the governor, at least 98 per cent favored a special session, a survey showed today. The majority, however, are opposed to the "no 1932 cotton" plan of Governor Huey P. Long, of Louisiana. The plan calling for a reduction of 50 per cent in the 1932 planting found the highest favor with Texas farmers, a check disclosed.

Governor Sterling said he had reached no decision on the special call. In the meantime office secretaries were continuing to compile the data as it came into the office for Governor Sterling's study.

SPECIAL SESSION SEEN IN SOUTH CAROLINA

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 30.—(AP)—Governor Ibra C. Blackwood said tonight that he saw nothing "that would interfere" with the calling of a special session of the South Carolina legislature for the purpose of outlawing cotton planting in the state in 1932.

Governor Blackwood said he was "satisfied" with the results of mass meetings held in county seats throughout the state yesterday to determine the sentiment of the farmers on the calling of a special session.

At the mass meetings, 37 of the 46 counties voted in favor of the extraordinary session. The farmers of one county—Colleton—debated the question for several hours but failed to take any action.

No meeting was held in Charleston county, where very little cotton is grown, and seven counties—Abbeville, Beaufort, Berkeley, Horry, McCormick, Richland and Union—voted against the proposal.

The governor said he wanted to wait until he had received full reports from the county meetings and had an opportunity to study the proposal further before summoning the special session of the general assembly.

He intimated he would take definite action some time during the week.

Buyers of Tobacco Plan Fewer Markets for 1932

Better Prices for High-Grade Weed, Lower for Poor, Expected.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 30.—Although there is no official confirmation, it is believed that in 1932 Georgia will have less than half the tobacco markets which have been operated in the past.

It is known that a tremendous reduction in markets for the next season has been discussed by officials of the tobacco buying concerns in this city during the 1931 season which is just coming to a close. Most of the officials of the seven or eight larger buying concerns are known to favor the elimination of a larger part of the Georgia markets from an economic standpoint. They believe that the Georgia crop hereafter can be better marketed in six or eight markets, covering a longer period for selling, than in 20 cities with a five weeks marketing period.

The 1931 season has shown that a considerable number of the markets in an adverse season are a great loss to the buyers, as well as to the growers. The cost of keeping a crew of buyers on a market selling one or two million pounds of tobacco a season is as great as the force on a market where eight or ten million pounds are sold. The buying concerns say they would much rather eliminate the markets and pay the difference to the growers.

Although the present season was a disastrous one from a general standpoint, tobacco experts point to the fact that it has emphasized the premium prices paid for tobacco of quality. Hereafter prices for good tobacco are going to be higher, it is declared, while the prices for the lower grades will be even lower than heretofore. With this advance information, the power of tobacco for 1932 may be assured that it is in the interest to work toward the highest possible grade of tobacco and the elimination of the lower grades from the floor of the warehouse entirely.

C. M. E. CONFERENCE URGES 'BACK TO LAND'

MILNER, Ga., Aug. 30.—The Marion district conference of the C. M. E. church with Rev. W. A. Kelly, presiding, closed today after having been in session since Thursday. The report of the committee on findings, stated, among other things, the following:

"First, the convention has shown more actual progress than any previously held. The program, with outlined subjects that were in every way practical, was executed with zeal and enthusiasm by the young from the various points in the district," said the report. "Very great possibilities lay ahead of us, if we but use the opportunity given to us as a church to develop our rural sections, and to encourage farm owning, the building of better school houses, home and church improvements, and in every way see to it that our pastors give their influence toward building up our section, and help to stabilize our young who too often waste their lives seeking new quarters."

"Second, we fully realize that we cannot help our people in the fullest sense unless the pastors and teachers of the public schools live among the rural people and cultivate small plots of land such as may be convenient to them."

"Third, in as much as the white land owners and our laboring people are factors to be considered in any effort that makes for better economic conditions, we urge that conferences be held at stated periods between our white and colored church workers to discuss all matters that pertain to human uplift. Too long have the negro preachers, white preachers and the white and black farming classes neglected the opportunities to meet in church houses in the rural districts and go over, in that helpful way, the problems that affect both alike."

"The common man must cease attempting to make things to sell, before he varies his crops and makes food for his table."

The statement was signed by such men as J. A. Martin, Atlanta; W. A. Kelly, G. H. Carter, J. M. McMath, J. H. Harris, Macon; D. H. Pitts, Barnesville; C. C. Norman, Haillocks; H. S. Brown, Griffin; and E. J. Martin, Durand.

Agile Burglar Gets Little for Trouble

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 30.—(P)—Probably Savannah's most agile burglar is the one who entered Hodgson hall last night, a branch of the public library system here and home of the Georgia Historical Society and who got but a few postage stamps for all of his agility.

The burglar had to climb a fence in the rear, a fig tree, both of which were not such insurmountable things, but after that he had to crawl up the wall of the building to the third floor windows before he could enter. From a window there he could walk down inside the building to the second floor.

DIVERS HUNT FOR BODY OF YOUNG ALBANY MAN

ALBANY, Ga., Aug. 30.—(P)—Men who are searching the waters of Kinchafosse creek north of Albany this afternoon, while hundreds of men, women and children looked on from the highway bridge and banks, for Billy Bacon, swimming young Albany man, believed to have been hurried into the stream when his car struck the railing of the bridge.

No one saw the accident, but persons residing along the highway heard the impact. Joe Beal Barber, county bailiff, was the first to reach the scene. He found young Bacon's car badly smashed against the bridge railing and the motor still running. It was reported that those who heard the impact looked up in time to see a splash of the water on the east side of the bridge.

As quickly as possible divers and men with hooks on long poles were assembled and the waters were being searched systematically, but several hours afterwards the body had not been located. Some expressed the belief that the young man may not have gone into the water but probably was so frightened by the crash that he jumped from his car and ran into hiding. Young Bacon is the only son of Mrs. Milton Bacon and is a son-in-law of R. L. Barnes, tax receiver of Dougherty county.

MURDER IS CHARGED IN DROWNING OF BOY

Mother of Child Lost in River Gets Warrant for Adult Companion.

MOULTRIE, Ga., Aug. 30.—Fred Payne is being held in the Colquitt county jail on a charge of murder in connection with the drowning of the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith in Little river on Sunday afternoon, August 2.

The warrant for Payne's arrest was procured by Mrs. Smith. The father of the boy was present when he was drowned, and Payne, who denies any criminal responsibility in the child's death, states he will call him as a witness at his preliminary hearing. It was just a tragic accident, according to Payne.

Only Smith, the boy and Payne were at the river at the time the boy lost his life. Smith was unable to swim and did not venture far into the stream. Payne says that he and the child were playing "alligator." In this game the boy was astride Payne's back as he swam out into deep water and dived. Losing his hold the little fellow went down. Payne says he got strangled, but sought to effect an immediate rescue and was unable to locate the boy in the deep and swift water.

The child's father was unable to join in the effort to find the body and the two men went for help. A search party was organized and the body of the victim of the Sunday afternoon tragedy.

At the preliminary hearing, which will be held here next week, the prosecution will make an effort to show that Payne was drinking at the time he carried the boy into the river.

Some Delay Start of Fall Term for Lack of Funds To Operate.

All over Georgia, beginning this morning, school children, students at the various colleges and universities, again gather in their classes to start the fall term.

Reports from practically every point in the state show that schools will be opening almost daily from today on through September. Dozens call their classes together for the first time today, many more tomorrow and others at various days during September.

Coffee county schools will not open until January 1, it was announced last week, owing to lack of funds and a similar situation exists in various other counties, according to M. L. Duggan, state superintendent of schools. Inability of the state to meet payments due the various counties of educational funds is blamed for this situation and Superintendent Duggan is hoping that sale of Western & Atlantic railroad warrants will remedy the condition in a few weeks.

P-T. A. President Issues Message Apropos of Opening of Schools

Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, president of the Georgia Congress, Parents and Teachers, issues the following article, apropos the opening of schools, a closer co-operation between teachers and parents:

"Schools are opening. Never before have they needed the sympathetic co-operation of parents and other citizens than at present. The economic depression is creating situations that are unusual, but that must be wisely met if children are to go forward without educational handicaps. Perhaps for such an hour as this the Congress of Parents and Teachers came into being. While the congress is composed of both men and women, a large part of the responsibility for carrying on must devolve upon the women. Men are busy earning bread. The world has recently placed great trust in womanhood. This is woman's great opportunity to prove herself worthy and able.

Program Outlined.

"You have organized your organization, named your committees, and outlined your program. You have set the school building and premises in order in those cases where there is no one else to serve. You have made some provision for the hot lunch for the school days ahead. Now your teachers are about to arrive. Make their coming a social event. It will react to advantage on both parents and teachers. If the school superintendent chooses to open the school term with a little ceremony, help him by your presence and sympathetic co-operation. Strive in the very beginning to create a right attitude towards school and teachers.

Berry, Caroline Hammond, Dorothy Teague, Majorie Roper, Eva Berry and Virginia Moon. Mesdames Hugh Barber, Jack Perry, James Hitt, Charlie Brown, Jack Carlson, Rose Walker, Bob Johnson, Haslett McCoubough, Harry Hightower, William Morris, Orrill Cox, Paul Mansell, A. B. Volburg, C. D. Carmichael, J. M. Bohler, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Odum and children, Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Dawson and children, and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Yancey.

Master the grade mothers. Through them help the teachers to make the rooms beautiful and attractive. Secure decorations in the way of potted plants. Ornament the walls with pictures. Supply the reading shelf with books. Provide equipment for a home education program, and so lay a foundation for character building. See that every child is in school, and if not, find out why not. Provide a book and clothing chest that unfortunate may be cared for, and that they may suffer no delay in entering their grade. Gather full and first-hand information about schoolroom facilities and playground equipment, and set about meeting the existing needs.

"Build your membership by enrolling all parents in the organization—men as well as women. Through the grade mothers conduct post card and telephone campaigns, and so encourage the best possible attendance. Collect membership dues at the first meeting and send the dues on the same day to the state treasurer, Mrs. Joe Wells, Route No. 2, Hollywood, Atlanta, Ga. Do not under any circumstances hold dues until membership is completed. Dues collected after the first meeting are sent to the treasurer at a later date.

"Launch your publicity. The way you use this great right arm of the movement determines the success of your every undertaking.

"Provide your association with a handbook, Child Welfare Magazine and leaflets, and remember that material is sent out only upon request. Send the name of every chairman to the corresponding state chairman. Co-operate with the superintendent at all times. Help him conduct the physical examination of school children. Arrange your parent education class.

"Above all, buy several food books at $1 each to use as attendance prizes. Until this debt is cancelled the activities of the congress must necessarily be curtailed. Do your full part in helping to remove this obstacle from the path of progress.

"Make your association what it is intended to be—a great, democratic, constructive organization with aims that are wholly unselfish."

Miss Anne Pridmore Assumes Duties As Girl Reserve Secretary at Y.W.C.A.

Members of Y. W. C. A. and Girl Reserves of Atlanta are welcoming Miss Anne Pridmore, who has assumed her duties as Girl Reserve secretary of the Y. W. C. A. She is from Greenville, S. C., and anticipates with interest her work with the Atlanta association, and invites former Girl Reserve advisors and leaders to call at 37 Auburn avenue and discuss plans for the fall program. A graduate of Winthrop College, in Rock Hill, S. C., she attended Columbia University and the University of South Carolina, and specialized in social sciences and is working on her master's degree in sociology. She taught in the schools of Columbia, Rock Hill and Greenville, and is recognized as a capable leader of young people, having served in executive capacities in the Christian Endeavor and as advisor in Girl Reserve clubs for the past five years. She has the distinction of advancing in the various steps from a high school Girl Reserve to the position as secretary in Atlanta, having served as a member of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet at Winthrop. She brings to the local Y. W. C. A. a well-rounded educational background combined with practical experience of varied types. She attended Camp Sapphire, Brevard, N. C., for the southern regional Girl Reserve conference, and was director of the Camp Lafa-Lot, near Columbia, S. C., which was composed of Girl Reserves from the Columbia Y. W. C. A. Miss Pridmore is a member of the Presbyterian church and will take a leading part in church activities during the year. Also she will be a welcomed addition to the Atlanta Winthrop alumnae group. There are over 15 Girl Reserve clubs in Atlanta, with nearly 500 teen-age girls enjoying the activities. Miss Pridmore will organize new clubs in the city and county junior and senior high schools, and in the private schools. Girl Reserves strive to "find and give the best" and the department seeks to create a sense of values which aid the younger girl in making wise decisions and directing her life in the right direction. Mrs. J. W. Henry is chairman of the Girl Reserve committee and will prove unusually helpful and resourceful to the new secretary, and the committee is composed of Mesdames Calvin Prescott, Percy Baker, John Pitts, R. E. Day, Hunter Bell, R. B. Eleazer, Fort Adams, Ben Tigner, James C. Shelor, Miss Caroline Nicolson and others.

Miss Nannie B. Crow, physical director, will arrive in Atlanta Tuesday and begin plans for the fall schedule. Classes will begin about the first of October and anyone desiring a folder containing information about prices, time of classes, etc., may leave their name at information desk, 37 Auburn avenue, and a schedule will be mailed. Miss Helen Respass, swimming instructor during the summer, leaves Tuesday for New York, where she will enter the New York medical center and continue work on her master's degree in public health. The swimming pool continues its popularity and the club class of the summer season was organized last week, due to the demands of matrons. As the Y swimming pool is open the entire year, and the water maintained at the same degree winter and summer, new swimming classes will be organized as soon as the fall program is mapped out. The latest club class meets Fridays from 10:30 to 11 o'clock and is composed of the following: Mesdames F. L. Carroll, R. L. Graves, H. G. Caruthers, Edward Hrossway, A. F. Hammond, R. H. Gordy, F. Life Is a Great Secret Society and Before We Are Very Old We Must Join It—The Secrets of Initiation Are Not All Pleasant.

A mother is worried about her son. What mother is not worried about her son? This one has real ground. For twenty-five years she has been married to a good, kind man who cannot make a living. They have had five children in those years. When the oldest boy was thirteen he was taken out of school to help support the family. His education stopped, and his responsibilities began when he was a mere child. Several years have passed and the mother notices a tendency, a growing tendency on the boy's part to be cross and irritable with his father. He is bitter in his thought about him and the mother confesses that when she thinks about the failure of her husband she becomes irritated with him, too, for he is making no more money, but less. They are dependent on the oldest son and he is restive under that load.

All perfectly natural reactions. Nine out of ten people would react the same way under the same circumstances.

When a man takes a defective automobile into heavy traffic and it stalls, holding up all the cars immediately behind it, everybody is irritated with him. Horns toot, sirens cry, wits wag their tongues, and onlookers laugh, and the poor discomfited creature either gets out of the car and calls on the nearest cop to help him push the offending car out of the way of traffic. That experience is the exact counterpart of the experience that this poor wretched father has had. He is evidently one of those imperfectly balanced creatures, who in spite of good intentions, and kind reactions, and affectionate feelings, is not able to "make good." They are all around us, these defective. They are pitiable, they should be objects of our sympathy, but instead, they are objects of irritation.

A man's failure is as much a part of him as his success. We forget that sometimes a man may have a brilliant mind and be utterly unable to translate it into money. A man may have a boundless energy and not enough brain power to direct it. He may even have all the necessary qualifications for success and lack ambition to succeed, which lack brings them all to naught. The element of failure in that man is as much a part of him as the element of success. He suffers more than anyone else when he does fail. He is more humiliated than his family. Could any man, no matter how lazy, prefer to loaf and have daily reminder by look and word that his children and his wife loathe him for being lazy? No. Could any healthy man take a thirteen-year-old child out of school and put him to work to support his family unless something were inherently wrong with him? No.

This is a critical time in a boy's life and he should have the best guidance a thoughtful mother can give him. He came here, not of his own volition, and got into jam, for which he is not responsible. He is stopped in the traffic against his will. He is rebellious and nobody can blame him. He deserves all the sympathy his mother can give him but she must not let that fact lead her to make him out a martyr in his own eyes. That would be a great pity.

The attitude of the wife toward her husband is the crucial point in the situation. If she is fault-finding and vituperative, if she shows her irritation with him and her lack of respect for him, the children will follow in her footsteps. If she has sympathy for his failure and teaches the children, by precept and example, to respect his good qualities and to pity him for his weaknesses, the battle is won. That's a hard thing for a woman to do. It has been done, for I have seen it.

The boy knows he is the victim of an unfortunate family circumstance, and he should be taught that he has a fine opportunity to show his manhood, to offer broad shoulders for his mother and sisters to lean upon. But he certainly should be given opportunity for more education and he should be urged to take it. Many a boy works in the daytime and goes to school in the evening without injury to his health. It is increasingly necessary for a boy to have a medium of education in this modern business world. The other boys are having it, and to compete with them he must have it, too.

In the average family the man of the house usually has some special privileges which set him up a bit. A favorite chair is prepared for him, the best chair is saved for him, the home just seems to revolve about him. Why not let this little man have some of that? A child of sapling growth, sweeten the incipient bitterness, it might even lessen his irritation with the circumstances of his life. Certainly the younger children should be taught to respect his sacrifice and to recognize his contribution to the family pocket book. As fast as they can, without hindering their education, they should be set to work to help the little burden bearer.

Life is full of anomalies. Even we who are experienced chafe under them and cry out because we cannot understand them nor account for them. Here is one of them. A child of sapling growth, used as the mainstay of a large family, a young lad who hardly knows the value of a dollar called on to help support a large family. In spite of the pity of it, many a child grows and thrives and develops character under such conditions. He learns a sense of responsibility early in life. He learns the importance of thrift. He learns not to expect too much of life and he learns how to accept disappointment. It is not what his mother wants for him, but it could be worse.

Life is a great secret society. Before we are very old we must all join it. The secrets of initiation are not all pleasant and the duties of membership are not all easy and the requirements of office are very strict. Therefore, every parent wants to keep his child from being initiated while he is still a child. But in spite of that ambition it often becomes necessary for the little ones to join up. Then the parent must look for the compensations. Having been a member for some time the mother has the opportunity to remind her son that she is standing by him, depending upon him, and eager to do everything she can do to make the revelations of initiation and the duties of membership as easy as possible.

SOVIET LIFTS BURDEN ON TRADE OPERATIONS

MOSCOW, Aug. 30.—(AP)—An order intended to reduce to a minimum charges on foreign trade operations was issued today by the commissariat for foreign trade and the supreme economic council. All Soviet import and export operations are to be taken into consideration, in placing orders, not only general technical commercial conditions, but also customs rates applied by the Soviet government to goods imported from various countries.

INSTALLMENT 1.

The Vale house was built on a rolling tract of land within 10 miles of the dome of the Boston state house. It was surrounded by a dozen acres of carefully tended lawn, garden, and orchard, and patches of intentional roughland where false Solomon-seal, low-growing moss, and small wild violets were allowed to go their own inoffensive ways.

Specimen trees spotted the area on either side of the drive that wound to the house with a gentle and perfect curve—Austrian pines, a blue spruce or two, a clump of larches, a rare old yew, planted by the first Rupert Vale over 100 years ago. And the only one of its variety in the country outside the Arnold Arboretum, so the present Rupert Vale was likely to remark. But with no hint of boasting. Simply as a bit of possibly interesting information to a guest who admired the old tree for the first time. A Vale never boasted. There was also a pair of purple beeches that stood quite apart from the other trees, on a smooth green sward of their own, sweeping the grass with far-reaching branches—feathery, and iridescent when in leaf, like a couple of peacocks with trailing tails.

Fabia loved the beeches more than any of the trees when she was a child. It was like a cave under their spreading wings. Or a house with "an upstairs." It was very easy to climb the stairs. The limbs of the beeches grew so near the ground, it seemed as if the trees were kneeling down to you, holding out their arms to lift you up. But later Fabia preferred the pines. They were taller, their branches at the top were sturdier, and there were no leaves to obstruct her view.

From a certain crotch in the pine tree that had been planted on the knoll by the old carriage house, Fabia could look over the tops of all the other trees. On sunny days that all ways hovered near the horizon in the east, she could see the dome of the Boston state house glowing like a little nugget of gold in dust. Or like a lighthouse in the fog. Law and order directing the way, keeping us safe, Grandmother Vale had said, in her big voice, when, one day, from a western hill-top she and Fabia had observed it together.

Fabia had frowned at having her previous little nugget of gold turned into a guiding light of law and order and safety. There were so many such lights all along the route of growing-up, if you were born a Vale. What if she should smash into some of the guiding lights, sometime? What would happen, she wondered. But thought before one spoke, with the result that one spoke less, and more wisely. Fabia was only ten then, but already well grounded in Vale lore and training.

The Vale house was low and spreading and shingled. In rainy weather it was the dark, rich, red brown of peat, and on sunny days the silky russet of winter oak-leaves. It was not the original house. The original Vale house had been swept by flames in the early nineties, and replaced by what Grandmother Vale had once scornfully termed as "This Country Club-looking affair." Country-Club-looking affair or not, there was a charm about the present Vale house that the tall, austere Salem type had lacked.

It seemed to have an almost affectionate feeling for its environment, clinging close to the rolling ground with its outcroppings of pudding-stone here and there, like a journeyer to a rocky hill side. There were wide, reaching-out verandas on all sides, and many low, easy entrances. Like the beeches the Vale house seemed to be kneeling down to you and holding out its arms. But in that respect it was a paradox. The Vales never kneeled to any one. Fabia loved the house for being low and protective, as much as the pines for being high and dangerous. Its windows were cut large and wide, with two panes only, so that much of the carefully tended lawn and many of the specimen trees were reflected in the dark, clear, glazing-pools of plate-glass.

Inside the house there was the same inviting quality. Few doors downstairs, wide openings, no thresholds, and a great square, informal hall, with a stairway broad enough to ascend four abreast, leading up to the sun-bathed bedrooms and baths above, separate sitting rooms for the two girls—Fabia and June; and up again to the pitch-roofed "barracks," so-called, on the third floor, lately remodeled for Rupert Junior and Murray, both, at present, away at boarding school.

The Vale house was furnished as only many generations of gradual collecting—not as a hobby but as a habit—could furnish it. For when the original Vale house had been swept by flames, its rarest treasures had been saved—the Stuart portrait of Rupert Vale who had planted the beeches, the Sargent portrait of Rupert Vale, who had planted the present house; also the Duncan Phyllis table; the ten Chippendale chairs (two being lent to the Boston Art Museum); the sideboard to match them in museum value; and on the sideboard the rare old English silver. There were countless American antiques, too, of various kinds. And skillfully, tactfully, mingled with all the old beauty, much that was modern and comfortable—deep low armchairs, luxurious with downy cushions; reading-lamps, conveniently located; silk shades; quilted pillows.

But today the rooms had been stripped and shorn. All the easily movable furniture had disappeared, and few accessories remained except what hung on the walls. For every available space on which a vase could be placed had been cleared for Fabia's flowers. It was October the twelfth, the date selected two years ago, and properly entered and recorded on the social calendar, for Fabia's coming-out party—a dance. "A small dance," so it had said on the cards. But it didn't look to Fabia as if she was going to be very small, as she stood now, looking down from the landing on the unfamiliar bareness of the floors, and unfamiliar fullness of the tables and mantels, crowded with all kinds and descriptions of flowers, in all kinds and descriptions of forms—potted plants, ribboned baskets, shoulder sprays, and countless mixed combinations, that had been sent already arranged in Italian pots, and jardinières, Talsman roses, Pernettes, Butterflies, American Beauties, with chrysanthemums of every color, size, shape, and variety that exist.

When the first load of flowers had come in the morning, Fabia had felt a sharp thrill of pleasure to see her name so often written on the florist's cards—"Miss Fabia Vale," "Miss Fabia Vale," occasionally "Miss Elizabeth Fabian Vale." All for her! Weren't people kind? But now, looking down at the overabundance, she felt a wave of skepticism. The flowers weren't really for her. It was simply because she was a Vale—simply the conventional form of payment for the invitation—the "social invitation," so it had said in one of the social columns, a day or two ago.

She descended the half-dozen stairs slowly, looking at all the careful preparations with something like a frown between her eyes—gray eyes, thinking eyes, wide and deep-set, with slender, sensitive brows above them. Her mouth, too, was slender and sensitive. It had pointed, upturning corners, that made her look as if she were always smiling a little.

WHY TALK BUSINESS AT A TIME LIKE THIS?

"A population of 500,000 by 1935" is Atlanta's slogan. Let's all pull together for a Greater Atlanta.

The Constitution's Weekly Business Review

EDITED BY M. D. GLEASON

There is hardly a need or a want that cannot be filled in Atlanta's stores and factories.

New Model Oil-O-Matic Being Shown by Randall's

The manufacturers of the Williams Oil-O-Matic automatic fuel oil heater come forward again, at this time with the double announcement that their new model K is the lowest priced quality burner in America, and by a slight improvement in the fire box they eliminate almost all the noise of the forced draft fuel oil gas flames.

By the achievement of this double triumph, they give to the American home owner a small, low cost automatic oil burner, that costs less in the first place, much less in the long run, and makes so little noise the factory calls it "Hushed Heat."

The Williams Oil-O-Matic for every heating need. This new model K was brought out for small homes and has larger models for extra large houses and a still larger model for large apartment houses, hotels, hospitals, commercial stores and large manufacturing industries.

These Williams Oil-O-Matic burners are sold in the Atlanta territory by the Randall Fuel Company and are sold, installed and serviced from Randall's large fuel supply yard on Piedmont avenue.

This old, reliable fuel supply firm, with a record of over forty years selling the best quality of fuel oil at that long time, is also making a great record in selling automatic oil burners, and have the right burners for the small cottage, the palatial mansion, the country home or the large manufacturing plant.

The Randall Fuel Company is making preparations at this time to care for the fuel oil needs of all automatic fuel oil burners in a bigger and better way than ever.

In fact, when they complete the installation of two large 30,000-gallon tanks they are now having erected, they will have eight large storage tanks with a capacity of over 200,000 gallons of oil, and with the resources of the Randall Fuel Company back of the fuel oil department, like they are back of the coal business this company can buy fuel oil at the best quantity prices and pass on the benefit of their great buying power to the consumer.

This firm has its own laboratory on the grounds, and tests each tank before it is unloaded. In this way they are sure to get the right grades of oil all the time, for they will turn back a carload of oil that does not meet specifications. This means that owners of fuel oil burners who buy their oil from Randall Fuel Company know that they will receive the same uniform light or heavy fuel oil all the year around.

Randall's fuel oil department has a staff of city and territory salesmen selling from their Piedmont office, and has a phono call or written request will bring latest literature or salesman explaining the many advantages of this new Model K automatic fuel oil heater.

CRUMBLEY GIVES GOOD SERVICE

Business concerns in this territory find the need of a reliable distributor for circulars, booklets, cards and other forms of direct advertising or information to reach surely and quickly homes throughout Atlanta and surrounding areas, according to Crumbley Distributing Service, 121 Edgewood avenue, who have distributed millions of pieces of advertising matter in this manner during the past few months.

It is necessary, says Mr. Crumbley, to put experienced men on this kind of work, and to make sure that proper distribution is made. In this way the desired field can be covered with the minimum number of pieces of advertising matter, thereby saving much in cost. Mr. Crumbley has operated a distributing service for many years and has a large number of satisfied business organizations, manufacturing concerns and individuals who continually use this "door-to-door" service.

AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN UNABLE TO VISIT U. S.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Sir Austen Chamberlain in a cablegram Murray Butler, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, announced recent political developments in England have forced him to postpone a visit to America as long as the endowment.

Dr. Butler said Sir Austen was to have delivered a series of addresses in the United States on international topics in October and November.

NEW ELECTRIC DEVICES DISPLAYED BY INGLE

At a recent sales and service conference, of all the Delco-Light dealers of Georgia called by Dave E. Ingle, Inc., 1005 Spring street, N. W., many new electrically operated devices were shown, that would especially apply to all homes and other buildings located where power and light electricity is now available.

A new vacuum cleaner was shown and demonstrated, as well as many cooking, washing, ironing, fans and churning devices, that can be operated with a Delco-Light.

As the vacuum cleaner was a new article, that the housewife, church, school and hotel and all other living in remote sections, could not use without electricity, the demonstration here with the Delco-Light hookup, makes it possible for the country people even though they be many miles back from a commercial power line, to enjoy all the advantages of city conveniences.

The most important feature of the sales conference, however, was the demonstration of the new Delco 32-volt farm radio. This new radio, the first of its kind, was especially made for the suburban home and back woods communities and gives them an all electric set, which does not require the old style storage batteries and all interference is eliminated when the generator is running. This means that the owners of this new Delco 32-volt radio, can get all radio programs with a clearness of tone that will enable them to get the full advantage of radio broadcasting.

In addition to the large number of dealers present from all parts of Georgia, three factory representatives, N. J. Burnett, H. C. Patterson and J. W. Jennings, of the headquarters at Rochester, N. Y., were present and greatly assisted Mr. Ingle in the demonstration of all new electric devices shown.

At the conclusion of the meeting the factory representatives announced that Mr. Ingle's territory was in second place of the entire United States in sales so far for 1931, and this was due to much enthusiasm among all dealers present, that they agreed to work harder to put old Georgia into first place in the country sales of Delco products before the year is out.

Mr. Ingle expressed his high appreciation to all the dealers for the splendid individual and collectively good business they were turning into the Atlanta sales headquarters, and he stated his office and sales room here in Atlanta would render them every possible bit of help in their effort to win first place in this extensive sales campaign put on by the Delco-Light Company.

Physical Unit Survey Gives Brighter Business Picture

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—(UP)—The dollar value method of measuring the nation's volume of business presents a deceptive picture of today's conditions, according to a writer in the current issue of the Nation's Business.

When measured by physical units many basic commodities compare favorably with the volume in years not looked on as suffering from business stagnation, the writer believes.

Fig iron production, often considered a barometer of general conditions, is cited as a notable example. Based on figures for 1930, when production reached a high point after a 20-year climb, this commodity should normally show a present production of about 37,000,000 tons annually, according to the writer's estimate.

September Expected To Bring Seasonal Advance in Business

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—(AP)—August draws waning to a close as a leading contender for the dubious honor of having been the dreariest month of the year.

Although early signs of autumn stimulus to general business activity have been somewhat tardy, a distinct pickup in wholesale trade during the past week seems to indicate that consumer demand is promising enough to warrant some replenishment of their stocks of merchandise.

It is widely felt that September must show some improvement over August, regardless of degree. Statistics for much of the latter part of August are not yet available, but a level of general business a little below July seems indicated, and it appears that most statistical indices will indicate a level somewhere around last December.

"Between Seasons." It is the between-seasons period for retail trade, and the late date of Labor Day this year has undoubtedly retarded the start of the season. Regardless of the depths of depression that have been reached, however, the ending of the vacation season, the opening of schools, and the cooler weather, combine to send the consumer shopping. Merchants are already selling some volume of school merchandise.

This is the 22d month since general business, as measured by most statistical indices, dropped below normal. Certain items of consumer goods long have been in a depression, or no depression, clothes fray and shoes scuff through to the uppers. Cotton textiles have been on the decline for a year, woolen textiles and boot and shoe production for eight months. A few of the smaller woolen mills are now reported running on a 24-hour basis. The steel industry was reported to have called back more workers during the past week.

The Peppercorn Manufacturing Company, one of the leading cotton textile producers, in placing an order for 194 spinning frames carrying 50,000 spindles for its Lindsde (Ga.) plant, publicly announced that the bottom of the depression has been seen.

Still Wallowing. Despite the gratifying progress made by certain isolated lines serving essential consumers' needs, however, the heavier industries, furnishing producers and capital goods, continue to wallow in the mire. The steel industry has been dragging along between 30 and 32 per cent of capacity for several weeks, and as Iron Age said this week, "it seems as if the shadow of a seasonal rise in production. The automobile industry drags along at sharply curtailed levels, and is taking its time about the introduction of new models."

The low level of the movement of revenue freight remains discouraging. The recently published report for the second week of August showed a gain of only about 8,000 cars over the previous week, or substantially less than the usual return for that period. Early estimates of the third week of August indicate a further advance, but a gain still under the usual rise for July.

Railway earnings, as reported for July, are appreciably worse than those of June, and while the roads have reached a point where they must spend some money for fuel and equipment, the basic steel industry looks for little support from these usually important customers.

Fair Demand. The number of heavy construction projects is sufficient to maintain a fair demand for structural steel, but the aggregate of building activity has fallen off further. The F. W. Dodge report of contracts let in the first half of August indicates a daily average of $7,640,000, reduced from the average of about $11,000,000 for July. Public utility construction contracts showed sharp shrinkage from July.

Commodity prices continue to show a degenerate trend, the woolen which is an encouraging aspect of the present outlook. There has been no general or precipitous decline since the drop of the early months of the year was checked in June. The favorable implications of this apparent stability are but moderately cheering, however, because of the fact that so many commodities are well below production costs. The past week has seen further marked strengthening of both crude and refined petroleum prices, reflecting the drastic measures in Texas.

U. S. FINANCING HOLDS BOND MARKET INTEREST

BY ALEXANDER HENDERSON.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—(AP)—The question of most immediate interest in the bond market is the terms of the treasury's financing expected to be announced tomorrow morning.

Treasury certificates of indebtedness maturing on September 15 total $634,000,000 and maturities of certificates and notes on December 15 total $904,000,000.

Thus the treasury will have to refund some $1,538,000,000 within the next three and a half months, all of which must be covered by new issues. The deficit, estimated at about one billion dollars, is in prospect for the current fiscal year as it would be difficult to raise the needed sum by increased taxes, because of the depression, an offering of some long-term issues would not be surprising at this time.

Such an operation would involve an important, if technical, change. The bulk of the maturing obligations, because of their short terms, ultra-short edge security and high market ability are held largely by banks and institutions to whom such qualities especially appeal.

Under the present plan, a substantial portion of any longer term offering would be subscribed for by these investors also, but such a result would depend largely upon the fact that the banks, because of the extreme ease in the money market, would have difficulty in finding other employment for their funds.

The prospective deficit makes it desirable for the treasury to reduce its volume of outstanding short-term debt at this time in order that the new may be open for future operations, if desired. Some extraordinary demands on the treasury for unemployment relief and similar legislation may be expected when congress convenes, which would create additional needs for capital by the government.

The bond market last week provided some of the most interesting price movements in months, principally among railroad issues.

New low prices in recent years were reached in a large number of rail loans on Monday and Tuesday but the trend was reversed on the succeeding day and continued upward until the close Saturday. A halting of the decline in rail issues, in view of its extreme edge security and high market ability are held largely by banks and institutions to whom such qualities especially appeal.

Aside from the rails outstanding changes were few. United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland 5-12s of 1937 reached a new low for this year at 104-5/8 on Monday but they were followed by a long-term British bond issue when conditions favor. Argentine obligations broke sharply on Wednesday but recovered their losses the following day.

For the most part fluctuations in other foreign, public utility and industrial issues were of a routine character.

In spite of this fact, actual production, he notes, was 11,000,000 tons for the first six months of this year. This compares with a 1921 production of 18,700,000 tons for the full year.

Other basic commodities which are found to make a favorable showing when looked at from this viewpoint, are said to be copper, lead, aluminum, silk, rubber, newsprint and foodstuffs.

"These figures for quantities," the writer suggests, "indicate the wealth of the people of the United States in 1931, in its real terms—the materials, goods and services being used by the nation and the people."

This Athey metal weather strip, while one of the simplest on the market, is also one of the most effective in keeping out cold air and drafts that come in most all houses around the windows and doors. The Athey company makes the statement that the strip will save about 30 per cent in a winter's fuel bill, which is a big item in itself these days.

The special feature about these Athey metal weather strips is that they are cloth lined and the groove side is of spring tension, which enables the windows to slide up and down, or the doors to close with the same ease in wet as in dry weather and at the same time allow the spring tension to take up the wood contraction many years after they are installed.

The principle is that by an ingenious way of folding the stationary groove member a narrow piece of felt cloth is clamped tight in the groove, which looks like an inverted "T" and the single or tongue member slides up and down in this groove, and as the tongue is about 1-1/4 inches deep, and the tension of the groove, with its felt cloth, grip both sides of the metal tongue for about one inch, or about the same as if you had a soft glove on one hand and clamped down fairly tight with the thumb and forefinger of a ruler you held in the other hand.

This means that not only is the cold kept out, but also the rain and all dust and soot. These Athey cloth-lined metal weather strips prevent the wind, or earth vibrations, from rattling the windows and once installed, the home-owner would not allow their removal for many times their first and only cost, as they will last about as long as the buildings they are put on.

In their regular line of making felt screens and doing store and cabinet work Floyd Brothers are pretty busy at this time. Landlords have long ago woken to the fact that they do not keep houses without fly screens, and nor do home-owners have to wait for any particular time of the year to get fly screens, as they can now get them in an open door or window one month as well as another, and then the screen seems to act as a barrier to speak things and gives a sense of security to the family within which they would not feel without good screens.

Floyd Brothers have one outside crew that keeps pretty busy most all the year around installing nice store fixtures and shelving for the various kinds of mercantile stores. In and around Atlanta just at this time they are installing some extra nice fixtures for the Schwab Clothing Company at Mitchell and Broad streets.

They are also busy with the new run through their well-equipped plant for interior alterations for more Atlanta stores.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 30.—(AP)—Six persons were killed at a railroad crossing at Montclair, N. J., near here tonight when a crowded passenger car was struck by an Erie railroad freight train.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. George Mihl and their 13-month-old daughter, Nancy, of River Edge, N. J.; Mrs. Mary Paulsen, River Edge, N. J.; and Mrs. Harry Krinke and her three-year-old son, James, of Dumont, N. J.

The party, on a vacation trip, was approaching a little-used crossing and ignored the danger signal, witnesses said.

NEW STRIP FEATURED BY FLOYD BROTHERS

Floyd Brothers, the well-known fly screen and cabinet manufacturers, of 535 Flat Shoals avenue, East Atlanta, announce that they have been made sales distributors for the Athey metal weather strip for the Atlanta territory and are making installations of this extraordinary good metal weather strip at this time.

This Athey metal weather strip, while one of the simplest on the market, is also one of the most effective in keeping out cold air and drafts that come in most all houses around the windows and doors. The Athey company makes the statement that the strip will save about 30 per cent in a winter's fuel bill, which is a big item in itself these days.

New Drill Bit Offered Public By Yancey Brothers Company

In discussing the present-day business problems with F. B. Duncan, manager Contractors' Equipment, he stated that throughout history, courage, character, intelligence and hard work have wrested victory from the most adverse circumstances. The leaders of tomorrow, we may be certain, are being proved in the crucible of today.

Present difficulties are great. All over the world there are baffling problems to be considered. The successful answers won't be found by the timid, the lazy or the easily discouraged. We cannot drift into achievement in such times as these. We have to be on the lookout for businessmen who are at this very moment laying the foundations of glamorous success.

Those who have jobs, or farms, or professions or who direct businesses, can serve ourselves and our times best by hard work, untiring thinking and generous dealings with others.

If you go over the roster of American industry you discover here and there outstanding corporations which by good fortune, wise management and aggressive ingenuity are doing better than ever before.

Yancey Bros., Inc., in the interest of serving their customers with the best and most outstanding lines of equipment available, have now added to their lines the "Thurston Detachable Bit" which represents the most important advance in rock drilling since the advent of the pneumatic drilling machine 30 years ago.

Everyone interested in reducing their drilling costs and increasing drilling efficiency will want to thoroughly acquaint themselves with the outstanding advantages of the Thurston detachable bit. The Thurston drill acts the same as the solid steel, the only difference being in the results obtained—simplifying the driller's work, increasing his drilling footage and decreasing his actual labor.

Knowing Thurston detachable drill bits and rods will reduce rock drilling costs we have stocked a large supply so that we can take care of our customers' immediate requirements. We will also be glad to demonstrate these drills to anyone not familiar with them.

We have many friends who have already tried out this new drill bit and not one of them has anything but the highest praise for them. They state in addition to materially reducing drilling costs on drill bits, it enables them to get far better efficiency from their compressors and jackhammers.

COTTON GOODS SALES CONTINUE UPWARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The slow but steady gain in sales from week to week which we have been reporting has continued this week. Sales of fine and fancy goods and of sheets and pillowcases have been especially prominent this week, in both these cases much in excess of production.

The price of cotton has been very steady and practically all of the business of the week has been done at full current asking prices with no shading possible. Buyers have been impressed by the steadiness of the market during August and are showing a willingness to place orders for spot and September deliveries at current prices though still disposed to await further developments before buying largely for the last quarter of the year. This policy is agreeable to the mills, too, because for the moment the raw cotton situation is much obscured by all sorts of half-baked cures for spot and September deliveries.
